Dr. J. David Gatz
Class of 2010

With this presentation of Ohio Wesleyan University's Young Alumni Award, the Ohio Wesleyan Alumni Association Board of Directors is proud to recognize Dr. J. David Gatz '10 for all he has accomplished since graduation and his commitment to the field of medicine.

While studying at Ohio Wesleyan, David majored in Biochemistry, Pre-Medicine, Zoology, and graduated Summa Cum Laude. He is a member of Alpha Sigma Phi and a member of the Men's Swimming Team while at OWU.

He earned his Doctor of Medicine at Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine in 2015. David continued with his fellowship and residency at University of Maryland Medical Center.
David has written a variety of peer-reviewed journal articles, case studies, abstracts, and publications. He has also given speeches both at the local and national level. He is currently an Instructor in the Department of Emergency Medicine at University of Maryland Medical Center.

David's awards include: Best Resident Presenter at Clinical Pathologic Cases Competition in 2016; Resident of the Year at Mercy Medical Center, awarded for distinguished clinical performance in the emergency Department; Senior Resident Lecture of the Year Award at University of Maryland Department of Emergency Medicine; First Place—Best Scientific Writing or Technical Reporting for "Advanced Management of Opioid Overdose in the Emergency Department," 40th Annual Specialized Information Publishers Association Awards.

For all that he has accomplished, we are honored to recognize David with OWU's Young Alumni Award.
